EDWARD JOYCE,
SURGEON,
His Great AMERICAN BALSAM,

Extracted from the beſt Medicinal Herbs, &c. for the Cure of the following Diſorders, incident to human Nature; proved by Experience in NEW-YORK, LONG-ISLAND, and elſewhere, to equal, and rather exceed any Balſam, Eſſence, or Elixir, &c. exported from Europe here, for the ſeveral Diſorders hereafter mentioned.

FOR common green or freſh Wounds, it heals at once or twice dreſſing, by cloſing the Lips of the Wound, and laying on the Wound a Pledgit of Lint dipt in the Balſam. In Nervous Wounds, where the Blood Veſſels are divided, &c. it ſtops the Blood immediately, and heals by a few Applications. For the Cure of the moſt inveterate Ulcers, only waſh them and keep them clean, uſing firſt, if there be any proud Fleſh, a common Cauſtick to take the Exceſſence away, then apply the Balſam on Lint. If the Ulcers ſhould happen to be fiſtulous, inject by a Syringe, and after, cloſe the Orifice with a Pledgit dipt in the Balſam, and ſo repeat.

There are Witneſſes undeniable of the Balſam alone curing a Fiſtula in Ano, now preſent in New-York: The Author of this Balſam (under God) will engage to cure a Fiſtula in Ano, even if the Rectum is perforated, without Inciſſion, except as much by a Lancet to make way for Injection, and no more.

For the Cure of Colds, attended with violent Coughing, Pains in the Breaſt, Inflammation in the Throat and Glands, Difficulty of Breathing, being obſtructed by tough viſcid Phleghm, by taking a Tea-ſpoon full of the Balſam, mixed with Sugar or Honey, it quickly cures, taken twice a Day, Morning faſting, and at Night going to Bed.

It is exceeding good in all Manner of Swellings; for violent Falls or inward Bruiſes, nothing is better, for it ſcatters coagulated Blood, and ſtops Blood that might be occaſioned by the inward Parts being hurt, or a Rexis of the Veſſels inwardly.

In the Cure of Pleureſy, after Bleeding (where it is required) give a Tea-ſpoon full three Times a Day, in Sugar, and between Times now and then 20 or 30 Drops of ſpirituous Nitre Dulcis, that is the ſweet Spirits of Nitre,—it cures.

It cures Conſumptions in them that are not too far gone, except they paſs the Age of Fifty, by taking of it inwardly three Times a Day, a Tea-ſpoon full mixt with Sugar or Honey, each Doſe. It ſtrengthens the Nerves, and is good in all Nervous Diſorders, by taking of it inwardly, and anointing the Parts outwardly, keeping warm.

Long-Iſland, July 25, 1768.

STRAYED or ſtolen from Charles-Town, a brown bay gelding, thirteen hands and an half high, branded on the mounting ſhoulder with a diamond, has a ſmall ſnip on the noſe. Whoever delivers the ſaid gelding to Mr. Bocquet, at Bacon's-Bridge, ſhall receive Three Pounds reward.

To the PRINTER.

SIR,

GIVE me leave to send you a short account of a ministerial convention, or political farce, acted twice every year, though not in public, which, I am persuaded, your readers will not only think very ridiculous, but unconstitutional. A few days before the meeting and the close of every session, an assembly is held at the minister's own house, consisting only of a few trusty creatures, who are called together to peruse the speech, and to consider of proper persons to move for, and second the address. These Gentlemen, who are generally proposed by the minister himself, after self-denying speech, modestly declining so great an honour, and desiring it may be put in abler hands, are at last overcome and prevailed upon to undertake it. At the same time these choice friends are let into the state of affairs, as far as is necessary, and instructed what to say in case of a debate upon several particular points. But to resume the business of the address; which perhaps is likewise drawn up and settled long before they met, as well as the speech; for it has been the practice of some late ministers, not only to put whatever they think fit in their master's mouth, (which is commonly a panegyric on themselves, or, at least, a justification of their measures) but likewise do the same office for the whole house, and make them echo back the substance of it by way of address. When these points are settled in the ministerial cabinet, a general assembly of all the well-affected is summoned to meet a day or two afterwards at the Cock-Pit, where the same farce is acted over again, in a more circumstantial and serious manner. The minister produces a copy, which being read and approved with great applause, it is resolved, nem. con. to promote a loyal address, not only to return thanks for so gracious a speech, but to applaud the wisdom of the measures it contains, and to assure the K--- of their chearful concurrence to any supplies that may be judged necessary in the present exigency of affairs. In this manner, deviating from the ancient practice of parliament, which consisted only in returning thanks for the speech in general; whereas this is a previous engagement to satisfy all the demands of a court; and though it may be understood at home to be only a compliment of course, it certainly must carry a different aspect abroad, and looks as if the parliament had, in a lump, approved all the measures of Administration. Then the persons agreed upon before to move and second this address, are proposed by another worthy Gentleman, who is likewise let into the secret, and unanimously approved. Here again they modestly decline it, as if there had been no previous meeting, and again, with a great importunity, are prevailed upon to accept it.---What makes this scene still more diverting, is, that when the C-----s return to their own House from the House of Lords, after the speech is made there, the Speaker always tells them, in a formal manner, "That he hath, with great difficulty, obtained a copy of it;" when above half the members, perhaps, had seen or heard it read a day or two before.

Extract from the EXTRAORDINARY NORTH BRITON.

IN the reign of Charles the Second, the people of England had many causes of grievance and complaint, and found it necessary to petition their Sovereign for redress; but there were then a number of Judges, Ministers, and ministerial Agents dispersed through the Kingdom, to prevent those petitions, and to procure addresses to the King, expressing their abhorrence of those petitions, and branding the petitioners with sedition and disaffection. The parliament, however, met in the month of October, 1680, and, amongst other matters, the right of petitioning came under their consideration; and in consequence of that, the conduct of those observers (as they were called) became also an object of their enquiry; when the following resolutions were entered into, and now remain in the votes of the House:

Resolved, nemine contradicente, 'That it is, and ever hath been 'the undoubted right of the subjects of England, to petition the King for calling and sitting of parliaments, and redressing of grievances.'

Resolved, 'That to traduce such petitioning, as a violation of 'duty, and to represent it to his Majesty as tumultuous and 'seditious, is to betray the liberty of the subject, and contribute to the design of subverting the ancient legal constitution of this kingdom, and introducing arbitrary power.'

Ordered, 'That a committee be appointed to enquire of all 'such persons as have offended against those rights of the people.'

In consequence of those resolutions, Sir Robert Peyton, and Sir Francis Wythens, were expelled, and received the censure of the House on their knees; and the House immediately presented an address to the King, against Sir George Jefferies, Recorder of London, setting forth, 'That he had, on purpose to serve his own private ends, and to create a misunderstanding between his Majesty and his good subjects, though under disguise of service to his Majesty, maliciously declared such petitioning, sometimes to be tumultuous, seditious, and illegal; and, at other times, had presumed publicly to insinuate and assert, as if his Majesty would deprive his citizens of London of their charters, and other immunities; and also of his royal favour, in case they should petition; and that in the like case, there should not be any session of parliament.' The Commons therefore besought his Majesty, to remove the said Sir George Jefferies from his Chief-Justiceship of Chester, and all other public offices and employments under his Majesty. He was accordingly dismissed from his employments; expelled, and received the censure of the House on his knees.

A short extract from an excellent essay on the English constitution, written by the late Earl of Bath, when he was the great Commoner, Mr. Pulteney, well worthy the consideration of all Englishmen at this political crisis.

"THE collective body of the people of Great-Britain delegate, but do not give up; trust, but do not alienate their rights and their power; and cannot be undone, by having beggary or slavery brought upon them, unless they cooperate to their own undoing, and, in a word, betray themselves. We cannot, therefore, subscribe to those two sayings of my Lord Bacon, that England can never be undone whilst by parliament; and that there is nothing which a parliament cannot do. Great-Britain, according to our present constitution, cannot be undone even by parliament; for there is something which a parliament cannot do. A parliament cannot annul the constitution; and while that is preserved, though our condition may be bad, it cannot be irretrievably so. The legislature is a supreme, and may be called, in one sense, an absolute, but in none, an arbitrary power. It is limited to the public good of the society. It is a power, that hath no other end but preservation; and therefore can never have a right to destroy, enslave, or designedly to impoverish the subjects; for the obligations of the law of nature cease not in society. Should you therefore put so extravagant a case, as to suppose, the two Houses of parliament concurring to make at once a formal cession of their own rights and privileges, and of those of the whole nation to the crown, and ask, who hath the right, and the means, to resist the supreme legislative power? I answer, the whole nation hath the right; and a people who deserve to enjoy liberty, will find the means. An attempt of this kind would break the bargain between the King and the nation; between the representative and collective body of the people; and would dissolve the constitution. From hence it follows, that the nation, which hath a right to preserve this constitution, has a right to resist an attempt that leaves no other means of preserving it, but those of resistance. And from hence it follows, that if the constitution was actually dissolved, as it would be by such an attempt of the three estates, the people would return to their original, their natural right, the right of restoring the same constitution, or of making a new one. No power on earth could claim any right of imposing a constitution upon them; and less than any, that King, those Lords, and those Commons, who, having been intrusted to preserve, had destroyed the former."

THE NEWS-PAPER.

'TIS truth (with deference to the college)
News-papers are the spring of knowledge,
The general source, throughout the nation,
Of every modern conversation.
What would this mighty people do
If there, alas! were nothing new;
A news-paper is like a feast,
Some dish there is for every guest,
Some large, some small, some strong, some tender,
For every stomach, stout or slender.
Those who roast beef, and ale delight in,
Are pleas'd with trumpets, drums, and fighting;
For those who are more puny made
Are arts and sciences, and trade;
For fanciful and amorous blood
We have a soft poetic food;
For witty and satyric folks
High season'd, acid, better jokes,
And when we strive to please the mob,
A jest, a quarrel, or a job.
If any Gentleman wants a wife,
(A partner, as 'tis term'd, for life)
An advertisement does the thing,
And quickly brings the pretty thing.
If you want health, consult our pages,
You shall be well, and live for ages;
Our empirics, to get them bread,
Do every thing but raise the dead.
Lands may be had, if they are wanted,
Annuities of all sorts granted,
Places, preferments, bought and sold,
Houses to purchase, new and old,
Ships, shops, of every shape and form,
Carriages, horses, servants swarm,
No matter whether good or bad,
We tell you where they may be had.
Our services you can't express,
The good we do you hardly guess;
There's not a want of human kind,
But we a remedy can find.

WILLIAMSBURGH, (in Virginia) DECEMBER 1.

This Day his Excellency Lord BOTETOURT sent a message to the honourable House of Burgesses, requiring their attendance in the Council Chamber, when, after giving his assent to such bills and resolves as were ready for it, made the following SPEECH, viz.

Gentlemen of the Council,
Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the House of Burgesses,

I THANK you very sincerely, for the material service you have rendered to his Majesty, and this his ancient dominion, by considering their interests as exactly the same, in the course of all your wise and temperate deliberations. Conduct, like yours, is the surest test of virtuous principles, and cannot fail of securing to you, in my opinion, the first of all rewards, a grateful acceptance from our beloved Sovereign, and his happy people. The inclination of this assembly could alone have engaged me to have interrupted the business of this session; but, as I understand, that it is generally desired to adjourn over the Christmas holidays, and not to meet again till the month of May, I do direct both Houses to adjourn themselves to the twenty-first day of May next.

After which, agreeable to his Lordship's recommendation, Mr. Speaker, and the other gentlemen of the House, withdrew, and adjourned themselves to the 21st of May next.

Among the Bills passed by his Excellency, there is one for the emission of 10,000l. in treasury notes, in order to satisfy the public claims, which will be sunk the 20th of November, 1771, by a tax on slaves, wheel-carriages, writs, and tobacco, and will be struck as soon as possible.

January 3. On Wednesday evening the honourable Speaker, and Gentlemen of the House of Burgesses, gave a ball at the capitol for the entertainment of his excellency lord Botetourt; and it is with the greatest pleasure we inform our readers that the same patriotic spirit which gave rise to the association of the gentlemen on a late event, was most agreeably manifested in the dress of the ladies on this occasion, who, to the number of near one hundred, appeared in homespun gowns; a lively and striking instance of their acquiescence and concurrence, in whatever may be the true and essential interest of their country. It were to be wished that all assemblies of American ladies would exhibit a like example of public virtue and private œconomy.

Not all the gems that sparkle in the mine,
Can make the fair with so much lustre shine.

January 25. We have not had such a severe winter for some years. Many of the vessels in James-river have had their cables cut, and been otherwise damaged, by the large quantities of ice that drove down from the falls. It is very difficult, and sometimes impracticable, to cross the ferries, the rivers being so much froze, which has put a stop to our communication with the northward these several weeks, and the roads are so bad there is hardly any such thing as travelling.

PHILADELPHIA, FEBRUARY 1.

On Sunday, the 14th of January last, died Sarah Meredith, aged 90 years. She was born in a little log house, where the city of Philadelphia now stands, her maiden name was Rush, and there lived till she arrived to woman's state, when she was married to David Meredith, and soon after settled in the Great Valley, Chester county, about twenty-eight miles from Philadelphia, then the westernmost settlement in the province, being six miles beyond every neighbour, except Indians, who were very numerous, kind and inoffensive; on which place she spent the remainder of her days, and retained her senses perfectly to the very last. She was mother of eleven children, grand-mother of sixty-six, and great-grand-mother of thirty-one, in all one hundred and eight; and what is remarkable, the chief of them are now living.

February 15. Our river has been froze over since the 4th of January till last Sunday when it broke, and by the thawing weather we have had for some days past, so great a part of the ice is destroyed, that a number of vessels arrived here yesterday afternoon. It is now seven weeks and two days, since any vessel sailed from this port.

A Sprightly, sober LAD, who can read and write, will be taken Apprentice to the PRINTING BUSINESS. Apply to the Printer.

 READY MONEY given for clean OLD and NEW LINEN RAGS, by the Printer hereof.

CHARLES-TOWN, MARCH 26.

WEDNESDAY last the Diligence Packet, Captain Clark, sailed with the Mails for Jamaica and Pensacola.

The same Day about One Hundred Passengers arrived here from Ireland, in order to settle in this Province.

We learn that Robert Starke, Esq; is elected a Member of the General Assembly of this Province, for the Parish of Prince Frederick, in the Room of Francis Powell, Esq; who declined serving.

Sunday last his Majesty's Sloop Martin, Captain Hayward, arrived here from Cape-Fear.

Since our last we have had no less than four different Alarms of Fire; but by the timely Assistance of the Fire-Masters with the Engines, they have all been happily extinguished, before any considerable Damage ensued.
